

Friends of Salt Springs Park

February 2021

www.friendsofsaltspringspark.org

570-967-7275

No News Is Good News?

The Department of Conservation and Natural Resources' (DCNR's) Covid-related restrictions remain unchanged from last month. We are thankful that case statistics are trending in the right direction. Perhaps programs will be allowed to resume on March 31st, as planned. We'll keep you posted.

In the meantime, please continue to follow the state requirements to wear a mask and social distance while at Salt Springs. The park remains open every day, from sunrise to sunset. It is a quintessential winter wonderland this year, as the photographs this month show.

In the Park

It's a silent, snowy landscape. Few hikers and snowshoers, the occasional sunbeam, scant wildlife. Just the place to go to stretch your legs and feed your soul.

A bit of the elusive sunshine, January 20, by Renee Hendrickson.

Looking up the gorge, February 3, by Concetta Schirra.

The ice formations are astonishing at the small cave near the Meadow Trail, often called the "ice cave." January 30, by M.J. Kelly.

Sycamores at the new divergence of Silver Creek, February 17, by William Chance.

